Complexities and challenges of the regulatory environment

As the world’s leading source of intelligent information for businesses and professionals, we intrinsically understand the complexities and challenges you face within the regulatory environment:

• Constantly shifting expectations of regulatory bodies
• Rapidly increasing number of regulatory developments
• Rising costs of compliance

With over 57,000 regulatory alerts in 2018

A typical financial services organization deals with an average of 223 – at times conflicting – regulatory developments on a daily basis. Each carries potential risk and can leave your organization vulnerable if the risk is not properly managed and mitigated. The consequences of noncompliance, which include personal liability, significant fines and reputational damage to the organization, are more severe than ever before.

According to the results of Thomson Reuters 2019 Cost of Compliance Survey, compliance practitioners continue to identify managing and coping with continuing regulatory change as their biggest challenge” between “Survey” and “while also balancing other compliance tasks such as interaction with regulators, regulatory reporting, compliance monitoring, compliance training and leading on implementing cultural change.

Additionally, efforts to comply can no longer be reactive; compliance professionals have to be proactive and anticipate the developments that lie ahead. You need to take swift action to assess the impact of regulatory change on your organization, report to the board and put appropriate plans in place.

All this means that you face a rapidly changing and overwhelmingly complex regulatory environment, a landscape which is set to endure into the future.

Expert, trusted knowledge

The expertise and knowledge of our regulatory intelligence experts and editorial team are second to none. Their expertise means that as well as having access to the latest regulatory developments, you are able to understand the actual impact of these developments on your organization.

Our dedicated in-house editorial and regulatory intelligence team is further deepened by worldwide Reuters news coverage and supported by a network of third-party experts around the world.

Together, our regulatory specialists provide independent, practical analysis and thought leadership. The team includes both regulators and the regulated with experienced former regulators and compliance officers who understand the spirit as well as the detail of the rules. They have held positions as enforcement lawyers, supervisors, investigators, risk managers, policymakers as well as internal auditors. The experience also covers acting as special advisers to regulators and the authorization to conduct third-party reviews as consultants.

Thomson Reuters Regulatory Intelligence content includes in-depth, practical analysis setting out key issues that you need to know and the steps you need to take, through to investigative and comparative analysis of complex developments and regulatory requirements. You have easy access to quick guides, briefings, special reports and video updates. Analysis is driven by regulatory events; developments and legislative change, including key deadlines and industry hot topics and based on source regulatory publications and court records.

Our journalists have deep industry specific knowledge and extensive networks to draw on to capture the latest regulatory news, opinion and emerging issues. They report directly from key conferences, events and the centers of policy making, to share emerging developments, industry thinking and experiences, and are often first to report on breaking news that you need to know.

The team provides global coverage of developments with experts and journalists located in key financial centers providing the latest updates across all time zones. Our extensive oversight and day-to-day tracking of over 1,000 regulatory bodies enables our experienced experts and journalists to identify emerging themes and diverging regulatory practices while sharing best practices and challenges for firms worldwide.
